

Matt SolomonThe Text of Philemon in 9th-Century Greek Manuscripts

This paper will present a detailed analysis of the fourteen 9th-century continuous text Greek manuscripts that contain Paul's epistle to Philemon. The analysis will be both palaeographical and textual in nature. Full palaeographical details will be provided on each manuscript. Also, full quantitative analyses will be done in order to determine textual relationships among the 9th-century manuscripts of Philemon and relationships to earlier and later manuscripts. Based on preliminary research, these manuscripts seem to mark a transition in the textual history of Philemon, being mixed in both textual character and palaeographical details. Manuscripts to be analyzed include: 010, 012, 018, 020, 025, 044, 0150, 0278, 0319, 33, 1424, 1841, 1862, and 1900. The results of the study will be compiled into a preliminary textual apparatus, which is part of a larger PhD dissertation on the textual history of Philemon.